There are some Senators who believe that this move will be successful. An amendment putting half the cost of the structure upr n the State of Virginia unlass a strip of territory is ceded to the United States, or something in that nature, would be used to influence the cession. It is said in Washington that noted Virginians in Congress would not oppose cession under such conditions. Atthough, for political reasons, they have esisted some advances from those who favor enlarging the area of the District of Columbia, it is claimed that the bill for a bridge could nevertheless become

Washington, D. C. Jan. 16.

My Dear Sir-Referring to our recent onversation in regard to the section of he country in Virginia immediately south of the Potomac river, I send herewith a military map, made in 1865, showing the orig-ical lines of the ten-mile square set aside for the seat of government and a suggested line in blue pencil, indicating the portion of that returned some years since to the State of Virginia, which should again be turned over to the United States to form a part of the District of Columbia.

It is believed, in view of the proposed Memorial Bridge and for other good reasons, that the general government should bereafter completely control a portion of the section immediately south of the Potomac river which at one time formed part of the District of Columbia.

It appears to me that if all of the portion north of a line parallel to and we miles distant from the original southwestern boundary of the District were again transferred to the general government the area thus regained would include all that is necessary.

I simply throw out this suggestion as a basis for consideration and discussion. Yours very respectally, JOHN M. WILSON.

THE MEMORIAL BRIDGE. Senator McMillan, chairman of the District committee, has taken up the subject of acquiring a portion of the land adjoining the Potomac river on the Virginia side as a condition for the construction of the Memoral Bridge. The matter was discussed to some extent at the last session of Congress, but it was not coupled with the bridge project.
